PRESENTERS: Nicole Hemphill and Jason Meister of PartsSource

Nicole Hemphill is Business Development Director at PartsSource.

Jason Meister is Director of Technical Services at PartsSource and has been in the industry since 2013.

WEBINAR AGENDA: During this 60-minute presentation Nicole Hemphill and Jason Meister will show attendees the best practice for standardizing medical parts procurement.

Attendees will learn:

1. Why standardizing your medical parts procurement process is important.
2. How best-in-class clinical engineering departments standardize their processes.
3. The benefits of standardizing your medical parts procurement process.

The way in which medical replacement parts are obtained may not be on the radar of most hospital administrators. Yet, with virtually every other area of their facilities already benefiting from standardization through the use of technology, this often overlooked clinical engineering pursuit represents a significant opportunity to contain costs, enhance productivity and improve outcomes. Learn best practices for keeping technicians focused on equipment repairs and preventative maintenance by making procuring parts a simple, one-stop shopping experience through the standardization of your medical parts identification, sourcing, ordering, tracking and reconciliation processes. failures examples along with an in-depth look at the subcomponents that can lead to issues with operation.
