

Chad Watson and Ann Hamilton present:

Why A Nuclear Medicine Camera Evaluation
Is Vital To Ensure SPECT Camera Performance
And Longevity

Sponsored by: Universal Medical

Wednesday, March 7, 2018, 2:00pm ET

PRESENTERS: Chad Watson and Ann Hamilton

Chad Watson, Evaluation Program Director at Universal Medical, has a degree in electronics engineering and over 17 years of experience in the nuclear medicine industry with 13 of them in a management position and currently runs the Universal Medical Parts department and Camera Evaluation Program.

Ann Hamilton, Radiology Director, Texas County Memorial Hospital, has 39 years of experience in the radiology industry with 30 years of Supervisor/Chief Technologist experience. Currently, Ann manages the Radiology Department at Texas County Memorial Hospital where in addition to her managerial responsibilities helps staff perform ultrasound exams, completes radiographic exams, and front of house duties.

WEBINAR AGENDA: This 60-minute webinar will feature Chad Watson, Evaluation Program Director, Universal Medical, and Ann Hamilton, Radiology Director, Texas County Memorial Hospital. The presenters will discuss the evaluation experience from the perspective of the company conducting the evaluation and the owner of the SPECT camera.

Attendees will learn:

1. Why it is important to have your SPECT camera(s) evaluated periodically.
2. Actions you can make after receiving the results of your evaluation to improve performance and useful life of your Nuclear Medicine camera(s).
3. An overview of what must be included in evaluation and how you can use the information.
4. A Radiology Director's firsthand experience before, during and after an evaluation was performed on their SPECT camera.
